

Autism and Me:

My Struggles with General Education

Presented by: Maurice and Lisa Azar

Maurice shares his experience growing up in general education as a student on the autism spectrum with a highly literal perspective. His story highlights both the strengths that have supported his academic success and the social challenges that remain his greatest frustration. Through honest and often humorous reflections, he offers insight into navigating a “black and white” view of a very colorful world.

Attendees will gain a deeper understanding of his school experiences, along with practical strategies that supported his success, including accommodations, advocacy, and transition planning. Maurice’s mother, Lisa, also shares a parent’s perspective on raising children with diverse needs.

This presentation is free to attend and open to the public.
Light refreshments will be provided.
